MY TREASURES.

My children, how many! Why bless you, there's four.
Two rollicking, fun loving boys,
Who always give mamma enough work to do,
But working is one of my joys.
Dear Ruby, who "helps mamma lots" in her way,
And my baby so winning and sweet,
Bright jewels adorning my wife's crown
In a home where angels may meet.
At the close of the day, I sit down beside
My baby, to lull her to sleep;
In sweet dreams of childhood the others repose;
Kind Father, thy watch o'er them keep!
You ask me I worried with trouble and care;
Ah, no, it is restful and sweet,
To be the fond mother of blossoms so fair,
To guide in the right their young feet.
"Would I wish to exchange?" Not for kingdom or crown!
Nor for all of your wealth and your pleasures,
You keep your fair lands and your couches of down,
I'll keep what is best, my four treasures.
Elsie Q. Alden in Good Housekeeping.

THE TWINS.

And Maurice Keller began thus:
The Lartigue division had been fighting without a moment's respite since the commencement of the engagement. They had stuck like nails at Bruckmuhl, at Albrechtshausen, and in the forest of Niederwald, where we had a hand-to-hand struggle with the Germans.
But those terrible guns of De Buse, that had gained a foothold on the heights of Gunstett, made it impossible to hold the positions taken. It was almost worth while having sacrificed the splendid Michel brigade, composed of the Eighth and Ninth Cuirassiers and the Sixth Lancers, in the charge at Morsbrun, and whose last survivors we had seen sabbared by the Thirteenth Prussian Hussars. This charge had only temporarily relieved the right wing of the army. We had just emerged from the edge of the Niederwald forest, when an order arrived from the marshal that Elsasshausen must be retaken at any cost.

I had met my twin brother, Philippe, three times since the beginning of the battle. We had hardly had time to cheer each other with a smile of recognition and call out from a distance:
"Is everything all right?"
"Yes, so far!"
This "so far" was not a mere commonplace, I can assure you, for our comrades were falling every instant, and the turn of one of us might come at any moment—a casualty that would have proved worse than death for the survivor.
The reader can form his own opinion; Philippe, who had only just graduated from Saint Cyr, was in command of a company, while I belonged to the second battalion, in charge of a lieutenant. The Prussians, who had suspected MacMahon's design, had placed eight batteries on the east of the village, behind some cherry trees, on the road from Woerth to Gundershoffen.

We had entered Elsasshausen and taken possession of the houses. A dozen of us had stationed ourselves at the windows, and fired so rapidly that the barrels of our chassepots had become hot. But in spite of the gaps we made in their ranks, one looking on from a distance would have said that they sprang from the earth, as they came on in serried columns.
The noise was deafening. Soon black smoke, like thick clouds, rose and cut off our view, but we still kept on firing at haphazard. Then the thick mass that rose slowly upward was pierced by long tongues of flame.

"The village is burning," said the old corporal who commanded us, while he continued to fire.
We had to stick like nails. The Prussians did not dare to come to close quarters with our death dealing guns, or the mitrailleuses that swept the roads leading to our positions, but they kept up a rain of bombs on the village. There were with us the three Pello divisions and all that were left of the Wissembourg, Cousin-Dumesnil and Lartigue.
I cast a glance down into the principal street and saw a troop officer fall.

A captain and a second lieutenant were assisting him and stood him up against a wall. I saw that the second lieutenant was my brother.

"Good heavens! the colonel has fallen," I could not help exclaiming.
"This is a day of casualties; so much the better for the lieutenant colonel," replied the corporal. "But go on with your work, my good fellow."

He had scarcely finished the sentence when a shell struck the side of the window, burst, carried away his head and made a hole in the wall, while another fell on the shingle roof, crushed it in and set it on fire.

We could stay there no longer. We had been smoked out and made the best of our way down stairs.

In the streets the regiments are mingled in inextricable confusion. Philippe is picking up the wounded and notices me.

"Follow us, Maurice."

And about thirty of us started to run at a quick step behind him amid a frightful shower of bombs that naturally still further accelerated our pace.

We took refuge in a large brick structure at the entrance of the village and stationed men at all the embrasures.

There were four of us in a room with Philippe, who was firing at my side. At the end of five minutes two men of the Seventy-fourth were wounded; one had his skull crushed and the other his breast half torn open. Suddenly my brother relaxed his hold on his gun and he fell in his turn. I sprang to him.

"Philippe, where are you hurt?"
"I am done for," he replied; "it's my chest. Listen: the colonel, who has also received his death wound, gave Capt. Collin and me the funds of the regiment."

He stopped to spit out a mouthful of blood.

"I have eleven thousand francs in notes of the Bank of France in my pocketbook. You must put on my clothes. They can't tell us apart, and you must take charge of the money. If you are not killed you will be taken prisoner. They search privates, but not officers. If you escape you must make your way to regimental headquarters and return the money to whoever may be in command. And now be quick! When I am undressed you must lay me on the bed at the end of the room and put your clothes by me."

I was dumfounded and obeyed mechanically. Outside we could hear wild shrieks amid a deafening uproar.

"Here they are," murmured Philippe, again ejecting a quantity of blood.

And he turned his face toward me as if to kiss me.

I bent over him in a last embrace. At the same moment the door, which we had fastened carefully, flew open. Three or four shots were fired in but did not touch me, when a stentorian voice cried out:

"Stop!"
An officer advanced toward me and said in French:
"You are a prisoner, monsieur. Your sword!"

I was dragged down below, where I found some privates and officers surrounded by Germans. I was indeed a prisoner.

We marched towards Cologne. My heart did not give my conscience free play. I loved my brother more than I loved myself, and I also loved my country more than I loved myself. They had snatched me from both in the crisis of their greatest agony. Those only who have lost a twin brother know that ours is no ordinary grief. It is the other half of us that is dead.

Philippe and I had never been separated until he entered Saint Cyr. I had been rejected and my grief was terrible to witness.

My mother, the holy egotist, was pleased at it. You can guess why.

My father, chief of battalion, had been killed at Solferino. My sister, five years our senior, had been married at 16 to a young physician who had just settled in the west.

My mother was thus left alone, as from peculiar reasons she had been obliged to consent to our being educated at Prytanee de la Fleche.

Perhaps, but for the outbreak of the war with Germany I might have realized her dream, which was to have one of us study law and become a magistrate, so that we could live near her. But the blood of a soldier coursing through our veins, and as soon as war was declared I volunteered in Philippe's regiment.

Never were two twins more entirely alike than we. There was absolutely nothing to distinguish us—that is nothing but a difference in intellect. I learned far less easily than he, but of course that could not be known by any outward sign.

In all other respects we were exactly alike. As children our parents only told us apart by the color of our cravats. At La Fleche the matriculation number on our clothes answered the same purpose.

It was only when I was alone in the small room I hired from the little tailor at Cologne, that I had time to reflect on all the consequences of my assuming my brother's identity.

I really became a forger by appropriating a rank to which I had no right, and allowing a certificate of death to be entered in the books of the Etat Civil that was incorrect.

I had received a letter from my heart broken mother asking for details of my own death, of which she had been informed. The peasants had found the little book containing my official description in the room where we had been fighting as well as a letter I had received from my sister, and both had been sent to my brother-in-law, the physician, who the next day learned the sad story of the recovered articles. They said that I had been carefully buried in the little graveyard of Elsasshausen, and that when the war was over my relatives could come to pray at my grave, or have my remains reinterred near them.

The crime that I had committed at the request of my poor dead brother weighed on me heavily. I was eager to return to France that I might give up that portion of the regimental funds that had been confided to me, and to establish my identity.

At last the day arrived, and one morning in the month of April, 1871, I ran at the door of the pretty house at Lisseau occupied by my aunt, a manufacturer's widow, and my charming cousin Odette, with whom my mother had found a home during the war.

April was exceptionally fine that year and the garden was rich in floral treasures.

All at once two voices cried out in unison.

"Philippe, my Philippe."

I was just in time to catch my poor mamma and Odette in my arms as they came near swooning away. They clasped me feverishly, almost wildly, in their embrace, as if some one was trying to snatch me from them.

Then Odette started back, leaving me to my mother, who strained me in her arms, gazed at me, again embraced me, and then suddenly exclaimed:

"See, Odette, how they have used him! He's only a shadow. What a terrible thing is war, and in what a condition it sends back those whom it does not kill. They slaughtered my Philippe. Oh! what they have done with Philippe. Oh! my fine stalwart boys! Ah! the assassins! You are not going back again you understand, I won't have you in another buttress in Paris yonder!"

"Be calm, dear mother, my regiment is being reorganized at Havre and we shall not have to march against the Commune."

She turned to my cousin.

"Come, Odette, I am not jealous; he is yours too. Ah! Philippe, love her well, if you only knew how she has wept and prayed for you."

At that moment I remembered something; Philippe and Odette adored each other and had sworn that they would remain faithful. Must I also steal this child's love?

What should I do? Must I cry out, "I am deceiving you both, I am robbing you, dear mother, of your sacred grief, and you of your affection, dear young girl?"

So far as my mother was concerned it would only be a transfer of sorrow from one beloved object to another, but in the case of Odette it would be a death blow.

I therefore continued to play the part of Philippe. His dear personality in which I which I had robbed myself, burnt me like the shirt of Nessus. It seemed to me that I could see him starting from his grave at Elsasshausen and crying:

"Enough! Give me back my uniform, my fiancée, my mother's sorrow. Give me back myself, robber!"

All at once—it is only women who are subject to this sudden change of ideas, but those who were living at that period will understand it—all at once my mother exclaimed:

"You are hungry, are you not? You have been hungry the last nine months. My hands must have the pleasure of preparing the first repast which you are to enjoy. Remain with Odette. You must have many things to say to each other."

"The young girl's face became illumined as with a spring aurora. She took my arm and pressed it.

"Oh, my beloved! What a day is this! It seems to me as if you had arisen from the dead!"

I turned pale and gazed at her wildly, letting the arm that she was holding fall inert.

"What is the matter? Do you no longer love me?" she stammered, also losing her color.

"Yes, yes; but let us say no more about the dead; they cannot come to life again."

"Truel! Stay, I am selfish. I forgot the other one—your other self, he of whom I was almost jealous. I loved you so. Do you remember what you said to me there, under the arbor, when we bade each other good-by?"

It seemed as if the earth was opening at my feet.

"Ah, yes! ah, yes!" I stammered like a culprit.

In this love duel I was playing out of time and tune, and she no doubt felt it.

"Tell me what it was," she went on suspiciously.

"Excuse me; I've thought of so many things since. My poor head! My brother—"

She pushed me away, gazing at me with a frightened expression.

"Are you not Philippe? Stay! what a horrible thought! You are not Philippe. If you had been you would have already taken me in your arms and covered me with kisses so I could not have spoken."

And while as a ghost she shrank back, holding up her finger like an accusing angel, and said in a voice trembling with emotion:

"You are Maurice, and it's Philippe who is dead."

I fell on my knees before her and covered my face with my hands.

"Pardon," I murmured.

She uttered a piercing shriek and fell to the ground as one dead.

My aunt, my mother, the servant, everybody, came running in. She lay on the floor apparently lifeless, while I was on my knees sobbing. What could I say? I confessed all.

The colonel of the regiment had escaped the casualties of war and was residing on his estate near Nantes. I met out the same evening, leaving Odette, in a sort of cataleptic fit, in charge of the physicians and went to return to him the sacred deposit entrusted to me by my brother and to tell him my terrible story.

He embraced me as if I were his son, undertook to make everything right and sent me back to my afflicted relatives with the expectation of obtaining a three months' leave of absence.

It came a fortnight later with a medal "for bravery at the battle of Elsasshausen, and for having saved half the funds of the regiment."

Ah! youth! At the end of a month thanks to our tender care, Odette was herself again and I told her all. We entered into an engagement that was to last until the close of the war provided I could obtain my mother's consent.

When my leave of absence expired I said to the poor child:

"Odette, I am going away again; comfort my dear mother."

"You will not go away," she replied. "Philippe appeared to me last night and commanded me to love you. We are but one being," he said; "if you love me, you also love him."

"You are only making a sacrifice for my mother's sake."

"No, I swear I am not," she replied, blushing.

Then raising her beautiful eyes filled with tears, she continued:

"In loving you I am still loving my Philippe."

I remained. There is now another Philippe, my son, and he is the living image of my brother and me.—Translated from the French of Edouard Siebesker for The Home Journal by J. Henry Hager.

Poison in the Respired Air.
Professor Brown-Séquard is reported to have lately informed the French Academy of Sciences that by condensing the watery vapor coming from the human lungs he obtained a poisonous liquid capable of producing almost immediate death. The poison is an alkaloid (organic), and not a microbe or series of microbes. He injected this liquid under the skin of a rabbit and the effect was speedily mortal without convulsions. Dr. Séquard said it was fully proved that respired air contains a volatile element far more dangerous than the carbonic acid which is one of its constituents, and that the human breath contains a highly poisonous agent. This startling fact should be borne in mind by the occupants of crowded horse cars and ill ventilated apartments.—Boston Journal.

Filling a Long Felt Want.
The genius crank seems determined to put the new department of agriculture to some use, or perish in the attempt. An application for a yoke of oxen, a horse, a cow and agricultural tools was received at the department not long ago, and on another occasion a man who had heard Uncle Sam was "rich enough to give us each a farm" asked the secretary for an order for 100 acres of land. Some people had an idea that the creation of the agricultural department was unnecessary, but others, it appears, regard it as "filling a long felt want."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

THE NEW CONGRESSMEN.

There seems to be a misunderstanding about the time when the Representatives from the new States can take their seats. If a special session be called as early as Oct. 15 it is thought they could be on hand ready to be sworn in by that time. The law provides that the Representatives to the Fifty-first Congress, together with the Governors and other officers provided for in the Constitution, may be elected the same day (Oct. 1) of the election for the ratification or rejection of the Constitution.

Civil bills for Congress, as well as for State officers, will be nominated in all the Territories in conventions to be held about Sept. 1. They will be voted for at the general elections, provided for in the act, the first Tuesday in October. The returns of this election are to be canvassed by the Territorial Governor and two Supreme Justices. Upon the returns being made to the President he shall issue his proclamation declaring the Territories States, provided that the votes upon the Constitution are affirmative. The State Governments go into operation and the rights of the Representatives in Congress to seats are completed as soon as the President shall have issued his proclamation.

CROP CONDITIONS.

What the Agricultural Department Reports for June.

The June crop report returns of the Department of Agriculture make an increase in the area planted in maize of about one and a third million acres and a total of over seventy-seven million acres. The condition of the crop is only a little lower than usual at this period of its development. West of the Mississippi, in the sub-humid belt and border of the arid region, the crop is generally in fine condition, though injured at points by the overflow and excess of moisture. The Great American desert is green with the great American cereal in high development. The general average of condition is about 90.

The condition of winter wheat is well sustained, notwithstanding the injury by storm and flood, the general condition showing at 92. Occasional reports of the injury from the Hessian fly, chinch bug, and rust are received, but local estimates of condition do not indicate much damage. The average of condition of the principal States is as follows: New York 96, Pennsylvania 95, Virginia 90, Georgia 94, Texas 89, Tennessee 92, Kentucky 88, Ohio 88, Michigan 89, Indiana 89, Illinois 94, Missouri 84, Kansas 98, California 97. The returns concerning spring wheat in Dakota are very unfavorable. From the results of long-continued drought the averages of Wisconsin and Nebraska are each 85, Iowa 97, Minnesota 87 and the averages of Montana, Idaho and Washington are low. The general average is about 83, which is very low at this stage of the growth. Rye maintains its condition and barley declines to about 92.

Consular Positions.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—At the State Department this afternoon it was announced that no more consular appointments would be made for a week and but few before Congress convenes. The position of Consul-General at Paris at a salary of $30,000 per annum, and now held by Jared L. Rathbone, of California, will not be changed for some time. Walker Blaine states that the department recognizes Mr. Rathbone as a most able and intelligent officer, and as he is in Paris at the commencement of the exposition he will be allowed to remain there at least until the exhibition closes in the fall. The Russian, Korean, Chinese and Argentine Republic Missions will also remain unfilled for some time.

An Extra Session.

PHILADELPHIA, July 11.—A Washington special to the Press says: After consultation with nearly all the Republican members it has been decided to call an extra session of Congress between October 15th and November 1st.

The San Francisco Alta gives the following good advice:

The number of destructive fires in Washington, Nevada and California admonishes to the exercise of better preventive measures. It is not alone sufficient to be sure of an adequate water supply. More attention should be given to building methods and materials. In new towns pine frames and sidings, with mastic partition and ceilings, are much used. Such structures are perfect fire traps. It is a waste of means to provide a water supply to extinguish them when they meet their certain fate. There are not many places where good brick material may not be found, and it is cheaper in the long run to build kilns and build of non-inflammable material. The early Mexicans built more wisely than their successors, in using adobe walls and the roofs. Our tastes reject the humble adobe without providing a substitute equally safe and durable.

The invitation issued to members of the defunct greenback party to assemble in their respective districts and choose delegates to a convention to be held for the purpose of reorganizing the party, is very much like the invitation to persons to attend the retirement of a departed friend. It is a sad affair.

The will of General Simon Cameron has been admitted to probate. The value of the estate is $1,700,000. Relatives outside of the children are given about $600,000. The remainder is equally divided among deceased's three children.

The Dwyer brothers offer to match their horse Longstreet against Huggins' Salvation to run a mile and a half for $10,000 a side. Huggins has not yet replied to the challenge.

THE STORY OF THE STARS.

The star spangled banner now glitters with a constellation of forty-two stars. The Fourth of July witnessed the entrance into the family of States of the two Dakota, Montana and Washington, which added four new stars to the field of blue on the American flag. The Omaha Bee says the stars are typical of the growth of our country and tell the stories of the States one by one, as they come into the Union. Just one hundred years ago all that the flag of our country could boast of was thirteen stars, representing the thirteen original States, which joined destinies in the great work of nation building. But with the beginning of the present century, the galaxy of stars had already been augmented by the addition of three, when Vermont, Kentucky and Tennessee cast their lot with their elder sisters. In 1802 Ohio added a new star to the sixteen. Louisiana burst forth in radiance in 1812, quickly followed by Indiana in 1816, Massachusetts in 1817, Illinois in 1818, Alabama in 1819 and Maine in 1820. Missouri added her luster in 1821. Then there was a lull in star making until 1836, when Arkansas shown upon the flag as the 24th ray of national growth. A star was planted in the flag for Michigan in 1837 and no other constellations were put upon the nation's ornament until 1845 when Florida and Iowa shown as twin stars. Texas' bright star appeared for the first time in 1845 and the next year it shown close to the sparkler representing Wisconsin. Not until 1850 was California's light refulgent upon the flag of the Union, and in 1858 and 1859 Minnesota's and Oregon's stars became visible. The next three stars were born in a blood-red horizon, Kansas in 1861, West Virginia in 1862 and Nevada in 1864. After the tempest was over Nebraska shown out clear and bright as the thirty-seventh star in the reunited constellation. The Centennial year was marked by the birth of a new sparkler called Colorado, and on the late Fourth the galaxy of brilliant was augmented by four great twinklers. But the azure field is not yet complete. Within the next decade the flag of our Union is likely to be studded with at least five and possibly six new stars of the first magnitude.

THE TRIBUNE IS RIGHT.

The Picche Record is opposed to annexation to Utah, saying:

The Eureka Sentinel wants Utah annexed to Nevada. The Salt Lake Tribune doesn't. The Tribune is right. There is nothing in Utah (excepting perhaps a couple of the Tribune editors, who are Nevada men) that Nevada wants. As to the matter of maintaining Statehood in Nevada there is no question whatever. It is true that the same number of people in other parts of the Union, or of the world, might hesitate or fail in maintaining a government over the same extent of territory. But there is good metal in Nevada's men as well as in her hills. Were this not true Nevada would have failed, as Colorado and Nebraska did, to join the Union of States at that supreme hour of peril when her bright star gave additional light to the constellation which seemed to be fading. No reasonable man entertains for a moment the idea of giving up Statehood. It is the cry of the chronic crack. Even he doesn't seriously believe in it; but he shrieks it out because it sounds stirring—given him a new sensation, as it were. If Nevada were not better American than the second-rate politicians who attempt to badge the State, Nevada would not now be a State. If Nevada were not better men than the above mentioned dividers, Nevada could not now remain a State. But, because Nevada are better Americans and better men, and because they know that they are represented by the patriotic Americans of all the States, and because they know that of all the stars on the old flag none is brighter than Nevada's, they will keep that star there till all the others are burnt out, if that event shall happen.

We Command the Future of the World.

Sixty million of people enjoy already the incomparable advantages which our incomparable institutions offer to one and all, but 100,000,000 of people could now be sustained without increasing the area of a single farm or adding one to their number by merely bringing the product up to the average standard of reasonably good agriculture, and then there would remain for export twice the quantity we now send abroad to feed the hungry of foreign lands. The empire of Germany, together with Holland and Belgium, has about the same extent of territory as the State of Texas, and the good land of the former is no better than the latter, and, while the population of Texas is not over 2,000,000, the population of Germany, Holland and Belgium exceeds 50,000,000. France, with an area of 132,000,000 of acres and 38,000,000 of people, has less land than Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska, and yet these three States only have a population of about 4,000,000, and the largest portion of their land is as fertile as that of France.

A like comparison might be made in reference to other parts of the United States and other nations, showing the same results. The four States just mentioned do not count more than 6,000,000 people, but they could easily sustain a population equal to that of Great Britain, Germany, and France put together. There can be no doubt that the agricultural capabilities of the United States to maintain a population greater than that of any other equally large inhabitable portion of the globe, and there is no doubt that the American race is destined to exercise the commanding influence in the world's future. When Napoleon I. drew up his troops before the Mamelukes under the shadow of the great pyramids, pointing to the latter, he said: "Soldiers, remember that from yonder heights forty centuries look down upon you!" Americans may justly and proudly from the pyramid top of opportunity look back on four centuries and stretch out their arms into the future with power to mold the destinies of unborn millions, for they occupy the Gibraltar of the ages which command the future of the world.—New York Mail.

PLACE HUNTERS.

The Clamor for Office Not in the Least Diminished.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 8.—In spite of the Civil Service law, which was designed to relieve to a large extent the pressure of official patronage, the clamor for office has never been more loud since the inauguration of the present Administration. Although the heat of summer is at its height, Washington is yet full of people who came early in March, and are still hanging on in the hope of final reward. Republican Congressmen, who ordinarily would have gone away for the summer, long ago, are still kept here by the importunities of their office-seeking constituents, which reach them by each mail, and Cabinet officers have been compelled to close their doors and see callers only by card, because the crowds of place hunters left them no time to attend to public business. Secretary Windom has grown weary of hearing the same old story, day after day, from the same people, and now he proposes to deny himself to visitors except upon the presentation of visiting cards. Mr. Windom has probably given up more of his time to the office-seekers than any other member of the Cabinet since the advent of the present Administration, and in the meantime the routine work of the Department has continued to accumulate to an alarming degree. The clerks in the appointment division say that they have not had sufficient work because they have been waiting instructions from the Secretary. On the other hand the Secretary says he has not had time to look into the merits of many of the pending cases because so much of his time is taken up listening to the appeals of place hunters. Secretary Windom's room is a delightful retreat for the hungry patriots who get the cold shoulder elsewhere, and it is not unusual to see the same persons there daily, sitting around in the comfortable chairs, drinking copiously of ice water from the silver service near the door. They invariably ask the same question, and usually receive the same answer, but they show up again the next day and consume from four to five hours of the Secretary's time that might be devoted to disposing of the very cases the importuning applicants are individually interested in.

John M. Morton, son of the late Hon. O. P. Morton, has been appointed Shipping Commissioner for the Port of San Francisco.

BREVITIES.

R. W. Parry returned from the Bay yesterday morning.

Presiding Elder G. W. DeLaMatry came in from Bishop Creek last evening.

Mrs. G. E. Holesworth and mother have gone on a visit to relatives living at Humboldt Bay, Cal.

Rev. O. H. Gardner, editor of the Prohibitionist, late of Genoa, has moved to Reno with his family.

Johnny Fitzgerald is reported improving, and hopes to return to Reno a well man before the 1st of October.

Mrs. I. Fredrick departed for Fresno Thursday night to attend her daughter, Mrs. Leah Levy, who is very sick.

F. G. Newlands is down from Carson to start in building his new house on the bluff on the south side of the river.

W. H. Fogarty, who has been a messenger for Wells, Fargo & Co. for a long time between Reno and Ogden, has been given the run from the Bay to Willows, Colusa county, Cal.

George Becker, of the Pacific Brewery, will soon have to extend his brewery over the entire rear of the block. His beer is so good that everybody calls for it, and the town is overflowing with its effervescent praises. Besides it is overflowing into the region presided over by King Gambrinus and his wife, California, and it looks as though before long Queen Nevada will occupy the bed and board of the old gentleman, with Miss Reno as her maid of honor.

FAVORED BY FORTUNE.

Sacramentans Play Lucky in the Louisiana Lottery.

The Sacramento Bee, of last Wednesday, records this:

Dame Fortune, through the medium of the last drawing of the Louisiana Lottery, lowered her favors into the laps of Sacramento with lavish hand. The unprecedented streak of good luck has been the all-absorbing topic of conversation, and a Brevity reporter this morning started out to interview those who had been designated as the lucky ones. The first one encountered was, of course, George H. Lavenson, The Bee's handsome cashier. George was not at all backward in stating that he had been enriched to the extent of $7,500 by the lottery. "When I saw the paper," said Mr. Lavenson, "I bought five coupons, and I kept them in an envelope and did not look at them until a list of the drawing was published in the papers. Then I took the list and saw that No. 61,605 has drawn the capital prize of $500,000. I opened the envelope and the first coupon I took out bore the figure 61,605. It looked so silly, and for about three minutes I didn't know whether I was standing on my head or my feet. The coupon drew one-fourth of the big prize—$125,000. We sent the ticket to Wells, Fargo, and in less than two weeks had the money. It came in greenbacks—$4,000 in $500 bills and $11,000 in bills of smaller denomination. You know that, however, as I told your reporters, I kept my eyes on the money. I have 'squared away' with the boys, have made some presents, and propose to put the remainder of the money where it will do the most good."

Samuel Gerson, the well-known fruit commission merchant, confirmed Mr. Lavenson's story, and smilingly admitted the receipt of his $7,500.

"Yes, I got away with $2,500—one-fourth of the third capital prize," said G. H. Stevenson, ticket agent at the Southern Pacific depot. "I received my money a few days since—five $500 bills—through Wells-Fargo's Express."

Another $2,500 was drawn by a young man of this city, employed in a shipping and commission house, who is equally as well known as any of those mentioned above. He got his money through D. O. Miles Bank, but there are reasons which impel him to most strenuously object to his name being given.

PICNIC BASEBALL PRIZE.

Four Clubs to Compete for the Same—An Interesting Event.

The Reno Baseball Club, the Dayton, Carson and Virginia Clubs will contest at Treadway's Park, Carson, to-morrow, for the Chosen Friends' picnic prize of $40.

The boys will "match off" and play five innings each, and immediately upon the result thereof the winning clubs will play off the deciding game for the prize.

A splendid tournament is anticipated, as each team will furnish a first-class nine.

Sparking of this Enterprise, of yesterday, says:

Captain McGowan, of the Carson Club, last evening met a committee of the Chosen Friends and closed all the arrangements for the game.

A good game of baseball is a better gambling proposition than a prize fight, and is much harder to "throw off."

In addition to the game by the big nine, there will be a game between the Mountain Club, of Virginia, and the Silver Stars, of Carson (javaliers) for a purse of $10 and $25 a side.

Old Humboldters.

Old Humboldters are figuring prominently in the Constitutional Conventions of Idaho and Montana. W. H. Claggett, who represented that county in the Territorial Legislature of 1883, is President of the Idaho Convention, and W. W. Dixon, who was Mr. Claggett's law partner at Unionville, and Hiram Knowles, who was Probate Judge of the county in Territorial days, are prominent members of the Montana Convention. It is stated that if the Democrats control the Legislature, Mr. Dixon will be elected United States Senator from Montana.

Ranch Fire.

Last Monday afternoon a fire broke out at Colonel Hardin's home ranch in Quinn River Valley, six miles from Willow Creek, and burned a large barn and corral, about fifty tons of hay, and several sets of harness. A sudden change of wind saved the house and wagon sheds from destruction. The loss is about $3,000 and no insurance.

WHAT ON EARTH

Is the reason people will not, can not or do not see any difference in cheap costumes put up by cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at various prices rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at "all" prices? No medicine in the world is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BLOOD PURIFIER AND BLOOD MARKER, and every bottle that does not do this will cost you nothing.

WHAT IS

SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "Humors," which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can IT BE CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. "My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofula; a neck tumor the size of a walnut, and a lump in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she seems to be a healthy child." J. S. CANTLIE, Nauright, N. J.

250 Beautiful Lots For Sale!

A RARE CHANCE FOR AN INVESTMENT AND A HOME.

THE MOST LOVELY PORTION OF RENO.

Facing the Truckee—The Aristocratic Avenue Riverside Driveway—Splendid Sewerage—Healthy Location and Safe From Fire.

The proprietor is now ready to receive proposals for lots in Powning's Addition. The map gives a good idea of the tract which is situated between the Central Pacific Railroad and the Truckee River, and commences on the west at a point near blocks distant from Virginia Street, making it the most central and convenient of any portion of the rapidly growing town of Reno. Unlike any other part of the town this Addition faces the beautiful Truckee River and Riverside Avenue is certain to become the fashionable driveway of the country. The streets are 80 feet wide, while Riverside and Keystone Avenues are intended to be 100 feet in width. All alleys are 20 feet wide. The soil is a rich gravelly loam, and susceptible of the highest state of cultivation. Being situated as it is it is more safe from fire than any other section. The regular lots are 50x140 feet. The sewerage is perfect.

Before Buying Elsewhere Parties will do Well to Look at These Lots.

RENO

Reno's geographical position is excellent. It is on the line of the Central Pacific Railroad, only 154 miles from Sacramento, and 244 miles from San Francisco. It is the terminus of the Virginia and Truckee Railroad running south, and of the Nevada and California Railroad running north. It has two Flouring Mills, Planing Mills, three Nurseries, a Soap Factory, Reduction Works, and other industries. A great Woolen Mill and a Sash, Door, Blind and Box Factory, are about to be established.

Reno has the Bank of Nevada with $300,000 capital, and the First National Bank with $200,000 capital. It has two fine papers in the DAILY and WEEKLY NEVADA STATE JOURNAL and the Daily and Weekly Gazette.

Reno is the natural home of the Alfalfa, and therefore the great cattle headquarters of the State. Here are fed the prime beef for the California market. Reno potatoes are the best in the world, and she also excels in Strawberries and the small fruits. Reno Wheat took the first prize at the great New Orleans Exposition.

The State Fair is always held at Reno.

Reno is the County Seat of Washoe County, the wealthiest county in Nevada.

RENO

Has no equal in Nevada or California for salubrity of climate, wealth of soil, diversity of products and stability. Situated in the very heart of the celebrated Truckee Meadows the future of Reno is assured. Reno is the City of Homes. There is not a house to rent in Reno. New buildings are occupied as fast as erected. Reno has advantages which no other town can equal. The climate is mild and genial in Winter, and even and healthful in Summer. There are no excessively heated or severely cold terms, and while the days may be warm in Summer the nights are deliciously cool; in Winter sleigh-riding is the exception and not the rule.

Facilities for irrigating surpass any in the State and there is no failure of crops. Reno has Churches of all denominations, Bishop Whitaker's School for Girls, Mt. St. Mary's Academy, the State University, and splendid Public Schools.

The Reno Water Co. furnishes ample pure, cold water for all purposes. The Reno Electric Light Co.'s electric light system, already well established, is being augmented. The Reno Gas Co. supplies gas for all purposes. The streets of Reno are lighted by electricity.

TEHAMA COUNTY,

10,378 27-100 Acres Township 25 N, Range 7 W, Mt. Diablo Meridian.

This township lies on the eastern slope of the Coast Range of mountains, and from 19 to 29 miles west from Reed Bluff, the county seat of Tehama County. The land is mostly timbered. The township is well adapted for grazing, as it affords pasturage for large herds of cattle. It is watered by the various tributaries of the Feather River. It is also very valuable for its timber, which consists of a heavy growth of yellow and sugar pine, spruce, and cedar. There is a heavy growth of chestnuts, a chemical and mountain ash. The even sections are in most instances government land, so that the parts most valuable as adjuncts to this township might easily be secured at government price, namely $2.50 per acre for single quarter sections.

In Section 3, coal was discovered recently by some farmers, but nothing was found down to the mine, although samples which have been tested show the coal to be of excellent quality.

We are assured that a Railroad heading for the Coast, and running through the Coast Range timber belt will be built very near this range. Price for the whole, consisting of 10,378 27-100 acres will be $25,000.

TERMS—One-third cash, and balance in two equal yearly payments. Apply to GREENWOOD & D. WOLF, Owners, No. 415 Montgomery Street, S. F. Or at Journal Office, Reno, Nevada, Sept.
